CPS Healthcare Becomes Ellumen
IT Company Enhances Services to Clients for 2010

March 24, 2010 (PRWEB) Arlington, Virginia: CPS Healthcare, a leading provider of IT services and solutions has changed its corporate name to Ellumen. The trusted management, technical, and support team at CPS Healthcare will remain fully intact and continue to provide high quality healthcare and image integration services to their customers under the Ellumen brand name.

Ellumen was chosen to represent an enlightened approach that synthesizes vision, experience, and a true commitment to openness and integrity.

“We were seeking a name that captured what we’re all about--attracting the brightest people to develop and deliver intelligent, effective IT services and solutions to our customers,” says William McCollough, Ellumen CEO. “Our mission is simple, to enable healthcare transformation through information technology.”

The company’s new name also reflects continued growth and success. Ellumen will maintain its strong clinical data and digital imaging systems and solutions practices. “As we go forward we’re applying our extensive real-world experience and expertise to the wide range of complexities now facing healthcare delivery organizations, providers and payors,” says John Leslie, Ellumen CTO, adding “The Federal government is leading the charge towards nationwide adoption and use of health information technology as a means to improve the quality of healthcare, reduce costs and streamline the business. We’ve been closely involved in supporting these efforts for many years which gives us unparalleled practical knowledge you really only get by actually doing the sort of complex, large scale efforts we’ve accomplished.”

Ellumen has become a trusted service provider to the Federal government, Department of Defense and Veterans Affairs, as well as private industry. Ellumen will continue to grow these relationships in the coming years. The company’s size and deep understanding of the markets’ needs makes them an effective partner and solution provider. “We’re a small, agile company but have demonstrated our ability to deliver large and complex solutions at the enterprise level and beyond” says Mike Luby, Ellumen COO. “Our experience is truly hands-on so we understand how to build the bridge between today’s systems and ongoing business needs and where our customers’ want to be both from a business and technology standpoint tomorrow and in the future.”
